AN ILLUSION DISPELLED.

Was Only a Plain Old Circus Snake-It Would Never Have Ventured a Combat

New York, July 31,-The strange sea monster which was dragged ashore at Blackwell's Island last evening has turned out to be nothing more than an anaconda, a species of snake often to be seen in museums and menageries.

This specimen will probably have his day in a menagerie, too, and be advertised as the monster of the deep which for weeks has been floating along the shores of Long Island sound, frightening the wits out of yachtsmen, sailors and Christian Endeavorers who thought they had seen it. She, for it is a female anaconda, will doubtless be described as a strange monster, with horns and grinning teeth a tongue of ferocious size and redness, fins like a fish and a tall like a rattlesnake, strange scales covering its body, the like of which was never before

As a matter of fact, this strange reptile, says the Evening Sun, was born in South America, had a good old anaconda for its pa and another for its ma was captured; spent some years, maybe, in captivity; died, perhaps, of indigestion, a falling with the snake family, and was dumped into the East river and opportunely captured. Now it is being stuffed. Most New Yorkers, however, will not be stuffed with the story hat it was a sea serpent.

The snake was taken from Blackwell's sland this morning, and for a while vas on exhibition on the dock at the oot of East Twenty-sixth street.

It is twenty-three feet in length and about twenty-four inches around the nish. The danger of being prosecuted was thickest part of the body. The skin was emoved from all but the head and tail. This skin is of greenish black and is

The head is small for the size of the body. It is about a foot long and is flat. At the muzzle of the nose are two nostrils close together.

The eyes at either side are very small and so fixed as to give them a wide sweeping view, a peculiarity of the boa amily. The head is striped with yel-The tall is long and black and yellow striped. It, too, is covered with scales. In every particular the reptile answers the description of an anaconda. The anaconda is a snake which is found in South American waters and makes very good substitute for a sea serpent when necessity, as in the present in stance, requires. The snake has been dead about three

The river, of course, was the most convenient place to throw the snake after death. There was a rope about the snake's neck when it came ashore. In this particular alone it is unlike the reptiles of the anaconda family. Dr. Stewart, chief of the medical staff of Blackwell's Island, was seen this morning. He said: "The snake, to my mind, is a water snake, and most probably an anaconda, a species of boa. The oda constrictor in length rarely exceeds 20 feet, while the anaconda sometimes attains a length of 80 feet. "This is certainly a water serpent, as has scales. It is hardly probable that it could have come from South America of its own volltion, as they stay very close to the fresh water riv-

It was dusk last night when some of the Blackwell's Island keepers who happened to be along the northeastern shore of the island spied what looked like a black log floating down the East iver on the ebb tide. At first they as it floaed inshore they were unde-

The long, black, scaly body and the flat head were bobbing up and down in the waves. The keepers all say that they did not run away. They watched it cautiously for a while, and at length were convinced that it was dead. Then they ran out a boat and Keepers Buckley and Gilligan rowed out to the

To make sure that it was not feigning death they put a few bullets into By this time Dr. Stewart and several of his assistants had been notified, and they hurried to the shore to see the snake. The keepers got a line under the body and then went ashore, but when they tried to pull the body in the

The doctors and keepers gazed at the thing in wonder. One ventured the remark that it was a boa constrictor, but his voice was speedily hushed. It was sea serpent; it could be nothing else. hose whose business is to supply freaks museums,

After the first excitement had worn away the illusion was dispelled. It was the plain old circus snake all over. would never have ventured a combat with a sound steamboat. It must have fied a natural death, and first come n contact with the waters of the sound not far from where the body washed ashore. BUT NEW LONDON TAKES THE CAKE.

New London, July 31.-The New London Day remarks: Is the sen serpent myth or is there really such a creature? From the latest report the creature has been seen dangerously near us, in fact, right in New London harbor, The following letter, signed by four seafaring men, has been received by the Day and there is reason to believe that the story is not exaggerated; To the Editor of the Day:

The undernamed four men were out in rowboat Monday night when they ame across the sea serpent. It rose just astern of their boat and to their consternation made for them. It seemed at first just a piece of sea weed, but when it raised its head and part of its body seven or eight feet out of the water they got out of the way as quickly as possible. When it sank into the water again it made a noise that was something like the sound of a whistle. HENRY MAYNARD,

July 29, 1895. A SNAKE WITH FEET.

The Hartford Times of the 30th says: Snakes with rudimentary legs and feet have been told of, but few, we guess, ever saw one. Such a snake has been killed (as we understand it) in or near the southwest part of Hartford, and left, in alcohol, at the Times office by Mr. George V. Brickley of 120 Wethersfield avenue. It seems to be an undoubted snake, though a queer ont, The head has been cut off and left with the body, in the bottle; a large part of the other end also has been cut off, for the purpose, as Mr. Brickley is reported to have said, of getting it all into the botle-a six-ounce vial. The snake was said to be two feet long; it has a half fuzzy look, and is of a very dark, almost black hue, relieved by many encircling yellow-ochre stripes, or bands. It looks, head and all, much like a viper, or an adder; but the queer thing is a pair of little feet, with toes and claws, growing out of the body near the vent. It is not easy to study the creature through the media of glass and alcohol, and we do not guarantee the genuineness of the apparent phenome non, but it certainly does look to be a real snake, sure enough. The person who brought the creature in seems not to have indicated very clearly the locallty where it was killed.

WATERBURY TO GO DRY. The City's New Excitement Over the Sunda

The Waterbury American says in anticipation of the drouth there next Sunday, as follows:

It will be well for the Waterburian to lay in his supply of fire water for Sunday on Saturday night hereafter, if he wants to keep out of police court In the past a man has been secure as far as his own personal liberty was concerned in going to any saloon that he can get into on Sunday and obtaining anything the saloonkeeper would furwholly on the side of the saloonkeeper and though he was caught and taker to court the men buying the liquor were free and even valuable later in the defense of the liquor dealer. It is safe to say that some of the worst cases of perjury in Waterbury courts have been committed in defense of a liquor dealer being prosecuted.

Now all will be changed by a law which goes into effect with other legis-lation on August 1, which is Thursday. This particular law provides that any person who enters a saloon with intent to purchase during hours in which it is Illegal to sell, or any person found in such place, shall be fined not exceeding $7. This does not apply to the proprietor, servants or police officer who enter for the purpose of seeing if the law is being violated.

According to another law any minor who, in order to get liquor from a licensed dealer, falsely states that he is not a minor is liable to a fine of no more than $50 or imprisonment for no than sixty days. If the law first referred to had been in operation Saturday, eleven Waterbury men would probably bave been in trouble Monday. A Waterbury offi-er crawled into a room over a saloon and found a crowd of eleven being served with liquor. He did not know at that time whether the new law was in operation or not, so he took the names of the entire party, and there were several of the number that had a wakeful night anticipating appearing before Judge Cowell. In two other in-stances later officers bave come upon rowds of thirsty Sunday drinkers. In ne instance as many as nineteen were congregated.

IN BUSHNELL PARK, HARTFORD. The Egyptian Lotos-About the Elm Trees

and Their Enemy. Hartford, July 31.—The Egyptian lotos in the pond in Bushnell Park looks thought that it was a human body, but very pretty just now. It had over 200 buds this year, while it had only nineteen last year. Many of the buds are blooming, making a beautiful flower of a delicate pink hue. The leave are large, some of them measuring welve inches in diameter. Four years ago the lotos was planted by Mr Roper, the foreman of the park, in about two feet of water. It took root in the sandy bottom, and blooms a healthfully as if it were growing in its native Nile. There are a number of handsome water lilies growing in the pond also. Mr. Roper says the worms have played havor with the elm trees in the park. They devoured all the leaves of several of the trees, leaving them as bare as if the foliage had been line broke. Then they got a fireman's killed by the biting from of winter hook, and after some trouble succeeded in landing the reptile.

But these trees have had a second growth of foliage, and they are well covered with leaves now. whose foliage was only partially destroyed suffer most, as the leaves de not readily grow on them the second time the same season. Mr. Roper was These doctors had never had to do with asked if the trees would be attacked by the worms again this year. He replied that they would not, as the worm make only one attack each year.

Highbinder War Feared,

San Francisco, July 31.-There is an armed neutrality in Chinatown, which may break out at any time in actual war. The cause is a rupture between the Sam Yup company and the See Yup company over the attitude of the Sam Yups, who are trying to convict Mock Lai of murder. Mock Lai is a See Yup. The row between the rival companies has drawn the Six companies so deeply into the strife that all have withdrawn from the consolidation, and the prospects are bright for another Highbinder war in this city.

THE CITY PARKS INSPECTED. They Are All Reported to be in Fine con dition.

The park commissioners yesterday made their regular visit to the parks of the city and found them all in an excellent condition. The inspection was listed for Tuesday afternoon, but in consequence of the heavy storm was estponed to yesterday,

A. DOERNBERG.

A Recent and Welcome Addition to the Bus ness Firms of the City. Doernberg of The Model, corner of Church and Center streets, has recently taken a residence in this city and moved his family up from New York. For fourteen years he has been associated with the large wholesale manufacturing house, M. Sampter, Sons & Co., occupying a block on Fourth street near Broadway. About four months ago he came to New Haven representing this firm, who bought out the clothing store of T. A. Wyre & Co., and after disposing of the goods, restocked the store and gave to it the name of The Model. For nearly fourteen years A. Doernberg had been or the road, a traveling salesman. After a short stay here and after looking over the clothing field, anxious to enjoy family life, he became associated with this establishment. His long and extensive experience in the wooler and clothing trade and his connection with Sampter, Sons' & Co., one of the eading and largest firms of New York, pespeaks a successful future for The Model, and is a guarantee that goods purchased there will prove satisfactory to buyers. His business is done strict ly on the one price basis, selling goods for what they are and refunding money in case any purchaser is not satis-fied. The fact that the business has shown a steady increase during the sharp competition in the clothing trade during the past few months is evidence that the public approve of this way of doing business.
